'ROUND HATTERS IN A DORY.

Plan of a Voyage in a Cookie Shell from Fulton Market to Charleston.

Three fishy young men from Fulton Market visited the office of THE EVENING WORLD this morning to announce that one of them, "Capt. John McMillan," would set out to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in a 34-foot fishing dory, his feet, and one (1) inch draft, carrying a lot of mutton sail, for Charleston, S. C., on a waiver.

A reporter, visiting Fulton Market, found "Capt. McMillan," who owned up to them, "John F. Harrington, twenty-two years old, of 919 Cherry street; that he was parading and posing in his dory, that he had fired all his life on the docks; that he once swam East River from the foot of Beekman street on a pig wader, breaking the thin ice in diving off the pier; that this feat was performed in August; that the present waiver was $200, set up by Mr. Wm. Larkin, against a lot of money; that Mr. McMillan, J. J.; that the dory was the Roanoke, and would carry a leg of mutton sail 14 feet by 8, 6 feet wide at the head and 11 feet at the stern; that the crew consisted of himself, one of his big New England crew, and the dory would take about forty men.

The Roanoke was proudly displayed, she is about 18 feet long over all, 4 feet wide, and draws about six inches of water. "The world," said a skeptical old salt, "have about as much chance in a gale of Hatteras as a herring ship in the English Channel," but "Capt. McMillan," who has sailed down the Roanoke in her, is confident of success in his coming expedition.

He sure he will take pig's feet, pig's tongues and bottled meats for provisions, and will last his ship with bricks laid out on the bottom, and as fast as he empties the cans and bottles of provisions he will fill them with water and replace them in the locker, thus preserving an even ballast.

The only present difficulty in the way of the undertaking seems to be the lack of money to get the ship with the necessary leg-of-mutton sail and provisions, and anybody planning to sail on a waiver should consider the fact that one can get satisfaction in that line by providing a dory to be loaded at the peak of the nation's debt.

IT MENAGED STEINWAY HALL.

Two-Alarm Fire on East Fourteenth Street Before Daylight.

Two alarms were sent out at 2:50 A. M. to-day for a fire which broke out in the four-story building 105 East Fourteenth street, adjoining Steiner Hall.

T. F. Krammer & Co., manufacturers of musical instruments and dealers in piano stools, &c., occupy the structure. William Steinway is interested in the firm.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Bruening, an employee who lives on the top floor with his family. He was aroused by his wife. She got up and found the hall full of smoke which poured into their apartments. He slammed the door shut again and aroused his son Louis and his mother, who is seventy-three years old.

The old woman insisted on dressing herself, and valuable time was lost.

Bruening finally got her out. He and his son carried her upstairs, and the family fled through the scuttle to the roof, where they shouted "Fire!" with all their might.

Their cries were heard by Sergeant Kelly and Officer Brady. The latter rang the alarm while Kelly burst in the door.

The first floor was all in flames. While the firemen were getting to work Bruening's family were having a hard time making their escape. They fled across the roof to a window in the side wall of Steiner Hall. This window, which is at the third story, looks out on the roof of the building which was on fire.

An old man named Peck, who is a sort of a watchman in Steiner Hall, was inside and saw the fire. He went to the window and saw the flames. He tried to open the window but it was locked. He then saw the family in the window and shouted to them to get out. He then saw the family in the window and shouted to them to get out.

The fire had by this time made much headway and eight minutes after the first alarm a second was turned in. The flames played havoc with the costly stock of music boxes, guitars, mandolins and symphoniums.

The ground floor and basement were wrecked before the fire was gotten under control. It is not known what caused the outbreak.

The loss will probably be $20,000 or more. A member of the firm this morning estimated the damage at $40,000. The loss is covered by insurance.

Six canary birds and a cat were suffocated on the top floor.

Salary, each $600.

All of the appointments are Tammany Hall men, and those who are replaced by them County Democrats.

A CLOUD-BURST IN KANSAS.

Houses Flooded—Railroad Tracks Washed Away, but No Lives Lost.

SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD: LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 2.—A water-spout swept near Fairmount, a small village some ten miles from here, last evening.

Many houses were flooded and the Union Pacific tracks were washed out for several miles.

Fortunately no lives were lost.

DEAD ON A BULKHEAD.

When Engineer George Colmer stepped off his locomotive in the Jersey Central yard at Jersey City, at 4:20 this morning, he saw on a bulkhead near by a man's body.

It was found to be that of a young man, apparently not over twenty years of age. There was a bullet wound in the right side of the head and another in the neck. By his side lay a revolver, with two chambers empty.

The dead man was five feet eight inches in height, had blond hair and complexion. On a sheet of note paper in his pocket were manuscripts evidently relating to the delivery of milk, but nothing was found to disclose his identity.

The body was sent to Speer's Morgue, and the Coroner notified.
